There appears to be mild soft tissue swelling around digits 3 and 4 on the left side.

The skeletal structures are well mineralized, with physiological cortico-medullary development and differentiation. All joint surfaces are smooth. A small spur of new bone is located on the dorsal aspect of the left radio-carpal bone.

- Carpal spur, mild

INTERPRETATION OF THE FINDINGS & FURTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

The soft tissue swelling may be the reason for the discomfort on palpation of the left paw. Differential diagnoses include infection, inflammation, edema and hemorrhage. Soft tissue tumor is unlikely. A radiopaque foreign body is not apparent but ultrasound is recommended to search for fluid pockets and radiolucent foreign body. The skin should be searched for prick wounds in case of thorns.
