INTERPRETATION OF THE FINDINGS & FURTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

REFERRING VET

Dr. Abina Glennon

The radiographic study reveals a moderate generalized bronchointerstitial lung pattern. The radiographic findings suggest potential for chronic lower airway disease such as eosinophilic bronchopneumopathy or infectious bronchitis including viral, bacterial, or parasitic. Further definition by means of airway endoscopy with airway sampling would be ideal. If this is not an option, a clinical trial of treatment for bronchitis could be considered.

Differential diagnosis for the hepatomegaly includes metabolic, endocrine, and vacuolar hepatopathy. Hepatitis and diffuse infiltrative disease cannot be ruled out. Correlation with the laboratory values recommended. Ultrasound could be considered to further define as well.
